DETAILED ACTION

Specification

35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, requires the specification to be written in "full, clear, concise, and exact terms." The specification is replete with terms which are not clear, concise and exact. The specification should be revised carefully in order to comply with 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. Examples of some unclear, inexact or verbose terms used in the specification are: "Customers patients are seriously challenged since they must coast a long time to wait for the prolonged procedure while booting the operating system".

A substitute specification including the claims is required pursuant to 37 CFR 1.125(a) because the specification is not in proper idiomatic English and there are numerous typographical errors, such as words combined.

A substitute specification must not contain new matter. The substitute specification must be submitted with markings showing all the changes relative to the immediate prior version of the specification of record. The text of any added subject matter must be shown by underlining the added text. The text of any deleted matter must be shown by strike-through except that double brackets placed before and after the deleted characters may be used to show deletion of five or fewer consecutive characters. The text of any deleted subject matter must be shown by being placed within double brackets if strike-through cannot be easily perceived. An accompanying clean version (without markings) and a statement that the substitute specification contains no new matter must also be supplied. Numbering the paragraphs of the specification of record is not considered a change that must be shown.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tung, US Patent 6,948,058 in view of Wen et al, US Patent 6,928,542. Tung discloses a method and device for playing multimedia files on a computer comprising storage media 100, computer unit 330, stereo unit 130, and inherently a display unit. As discussed in column 2 lines 37-48, the user can determine whether the computer is used with its regular operating system or if it is used as a multimedia player. The BIOS runs to different types of programs accordingly. Although the user is given the option to configure the computer, there is no teaching that a function menu is provided for configuring the computer. Wen et al teach a method and system for setting an operating system through a menu at startup of the computer. See figures 1, 3, and 7. The method discloses that a function menu is provided by modifying the BIOS booting procedure. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to modify Tung, per the teachings of Wen, by modifying the BIOS booting procedure for the purpose of giving the user a visual indication of the computer configuration selections. Claims 1, 4, and 10 are rejected. As to claim 2, the stereo operation instruction is provided by commands unit 320. Per claim 3, inherently a CD-ROM storage media has the claimed instruction set.

Art Unit: 2615

Claims 5 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tung in view of Wen as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Du et al, US Patent Application Publication US2003/0188144. The combination of Tung and Wen does not disclose that the display has a memory, processor and a LCD module. Du et al teach a integrated PDA and computer, in the same field of endeavor as Wen, the computer having a LCD module and inherent memory and processor. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to modify the combination of Tung and Wen to have the display taught by Du for the purpose of providing the highest quality video to the user.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 6-8 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
